Patricia Parker—Margery Bailey Professor in English and Dramatic Literature and Professor of Comparative Literature at Stanford University since 1988—received her BA in History and English from the University of Manitoba (1967), MA in English from the University of Toronto (1968), and PhD in Comparative Literature from Yale (1976). She has worked for the Tanzanian Ministry of Education (1968-70) and taught at the University of East Africa (1970-71), the University of Toronto (1975-86), the Folger Shakespeare Institute (1986), UC Berkeley (1987-8), and the School of Criticism and Theory (Cornell, 1998). Her earlier books and co-edited collections include Inescapable Romance: Studies in the Poetics of a Mode; Literary Fat Ladies: Rhetoric, Gender, Property; Lyric Poetry: Beyond New Criticism; Shakespeare and the Question of Theory; Literary Theory / Renaissance Texts; Women, “Race,” and Writing in the Early Modern Period; and Shakespeare from the Margins. Since the mid-1980s, when she first published on rhetorics of property, commercial accounts, circumstantial evidence, and the zero or "O", her work has increasingly stressed the importance of approaching Shakespeare's language, as well as other early texts and contexts, from diverse geopolitical, multilingual, and interdisciplinary perspectives.

The Gottschalk Memorial Lecture was established in memory of Paul Gottschalk, Professor of English at Cornell and a scholar of British Renaissance literature and author of "The Meanings of Hamlet" (1972). He died in 1977 at the age of 38.
